IMPROVEMENT IN SAW MILL MACHINERY.

(Patented in the United States and Canada.)

It is one of the most important inventions of the age and the superiority is incontestible. Its application to Mills enabling gangs of saws simplifies the construction, lessens horse power and speed, and greatly adds to the capacity of a Mill—from seventy five to one hundred per cent! An operating model can be seen at the office of the undersigned, who is empowered to sell rights, and make arrangements elsewhere for the manufacture of machinery.

The Troubles in France

Paris, Jan 17—La Marseillaise to-day publishes the following dispatch from Madrid A public meeting of twenty thousand Republicans, held in Madrid, by a unanimous vote sent congratulations to the Republicans of Paris and to deputy Rochefort, the devoted champion of the Democracy

In the Corps Legislatif to-day a debate on the arraignment of Deputy Henri Rochefort was opened. From the beginning of the sitting the Chamber was crowded with spectators and all the deputies were present.

M Rochefort occupied his usual seat, and all the members of the Cabinet were present on the ministerial bench

M Estancelin opened the discussion with a proposition made on the part of the left centre. He said that they felt confident of the strength of the ministry and would advise that the prosecution against the offending deputy be abandoned

M Olivier replied that the government could not accept this proposal He demanded a vote of the Chambers on the question at issue, otherwise the ministers could not stay in office. This declaration was received with applause from all parts of the hall

M Rochefort made a violent speech He declared that the ministry were determined to get rid of him as a deputy, not being able otherwise to destroy him. M Rochefort was frequently interrupted by protestations from members

A crowd collected in the hall of the Corps Legislatif, and a large police force was on hand

The Chamber decided to grant the demand of the government for the arraignment of Rochefort by an overwhelming majority The vote stood 226 for and 36 against prosecution

As soon as the vote was announced a deputy rose and protested against this sudden termination of the debate, which he charged was brought about to prevent the proper consideration of so grave a question The Chamber then adjourned

When the news of the result was received by the crowd waiting outside a great demonstration was made in favor of Rochefort, and the excitement was kept up all the evening in various parts of the city

Paris, Jan 18—There was a great demonstration last night on the Boulevard Mont Marte by the friends of Rochefort The crowd was dispersed by the military without a conflict, and the Boulevard was occupied by the troops until after 3 o'clock this morning The police were also very active all night There was considerable disorder and many arrests were made At this hour (1 30 P M) the city is quiet

M Raspail, one of the deputies in the Corps Legislatif, died this morning

The execution of Tropmann, the murderer of the Kinck family, which was originally fixed for to-day, has been postponed till next Tuesday, on account of the popular agitation

THUNDER STORM

WASHINGTON, Jan 17

This section of the country was visited by a storm of wind and rain accompanied by thunder and lightning Considerable damage was done to buildings, but no lives were lost

ST LOUIS, Jan 17

A heavy thunder storm passed over the city last evening doing considerable damage to signs, awnings, chimneys, shutters, trees, &c At the Varieties Theatre a panic occurred, during which several persons were severely bruised while attempting to escape from the building

At the Olympic The atre where religious services were being held, similar scenes occurred Several women fainted and a number of persons injured

The telegraph wires were prostrated in all directions.

The weather, which had been very warm all day, turned cold after the storm and during the night froze nearly as hard as at any time during the winter

THE UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION

WASHINGTON, Jan 18

The second annual convention of the Universal Suffrage Association met in this city this morning Mrs Stanton addressed the audience, stating the object of the convention, which she said had assembled to discuss the question of giving to women the right of franchise Congress had already enfranchised all the men in the country, whether natives of Cuba, Africa, or any other country, and it was fitting that the women should assemble and perfect their arrangements to ask that the 16th amendment be added to the Constitution of the United States She predicted that woman suffrage would be the great question at issue in 1872, and that if the Republican members of Congress did not hurry up and endorse it the Democratic party would step in and deprive them of all the glory—Phebe Cousins of St. Louis asserted that the West had set the ball in motion and would not rest until the East had come into line—Senator Pomeroy made a short speech, taking the ground that as woman was answerable before the law she was therefore fully qualified to vote

JOHN H. LYNDE, - - PROPRIETOR.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1870

There is something suggestive of a society for the prevention of cruelty to mankind in the manner in which the Democracy lacerate the feelings of their wheel horses. The Hon Isaac Reed has just been for the untold time balloted for in view of some impossible office He united the Democratic strength in the Legislature for United States Senator The apple of Tantallus was never more temptingly held out than this Senatorial fruit, but somehow Mr Reed didn't even reach to swing it with his longest arm and standing upon tiptoes It's too bad thus periodically to aggravate some martyr to the indefinable "principles" that so inseparable conglutinate, the Democratic party But we can't help querying at every turn of the wheel, when those ancient political lights are annually snuffed, whether of any prospect of success should ever glimmer to the Democracy, younger harvesters wouldn't clamber higher, and whether to illustrate the old rule that republics are ungrateful, those old wheel horses that bear the hopeless burdens wouldn't be snuffed entirely too low

Our opinion of a year ago, that, on the return of Mr Hemlin to the U S Senate, there was as not exhibited any lack of confidence in Senator Morrill, was amply verified in the election of Mr Morrill to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Fessenden — That gentleman has the satisfaction of returning to Washington as the unanimous choice of the Republican party of Maine for the place which he has heretofore so well filled — The entire Maine delegation is now not only personally unexceptionable, but able

A recent issue of The Tribune says

"If there be one proposition on which Political Economists are agreed, we should say it is this—Capital, Enterprise, Labor, will seek and find that employment wherein the probability of recompense is greatest. If Corn growing or Cotton-growing will pay ten per cent, and Iron smelting but six, then the former will steadily increase, at the expense of the latter, till an equilibrium of profit is secured and vice versa If this isn't a law, what is?'

We take The Tribune at its word, for it has inadvertently and carelessly admitted the fallacy of protection as a principle If one industry will pay ten per cent, and another but six "then the former will steadily increase" "till an equilibrium of profit is secured." We re-assert that is law. Now we have a plain question to ask If iron smelting will not pay naturally beside other employments, why undertake to change the law of nature? And does not every such undertaking add just so much to the "burden of the consumer? Or, in other words, can you by "protection" change a natural law without expense? And if it is expensive why is not free trade, so far as consistent with the necessities of the time the proper rule of government, and true political economy?

The New York World has been accepted as law by the confiding Democratic masses People outside of that magic circle well understand the pretentious character of that organ from the manner it has juggled the results of elections, and brought victory out of defeat. But among the latest evidences of its unreliability is one furnished by itself— Almost every since the Secretary of the Treasury began to exhibit a falling off in the debt, the World has endeavored by misapplying figures to show that the Secretary has falsified the result and asserted 'that the national debt has not been reduced to any beneficial extent. A few days since that veracious organ had the following remark in connection with the proposition to refund the debt "The country needs immediate relief, not from five millions of annual taxes, but from a hundred millions, and this relief could be had at once by reducing the revenue to the actual necessities of expenditure, and postponing, for the present, the policy of diminishing the principal of the debt" If that doesn't refute its own previous arguments, then we cannot read. It puzzles us to know how, if the debt has not decreased, the policy of decreasing is to be changed. But another proof comes now from a Democratic source to the unreliability of the World— When the Rev Horace Cooke returned to New York he went into the World office and made a raid upon the writer of a sensational account of his transactions The Boston Post's correspondent telegraphed an account of the affair which wasn't very creditable to the World editors, whereupon the World declared the account an entire fabrication, insinuating the general untruthfulness of the Post. Now the Post says the World "with its usual swill milk swagger" has the "effrontery" to assert that the Post correspondent is inaccurate and adds that "the charge of inaccuracy comes with a peculiar grace from the World, which had published two columns of the most infernal lies about poor Cooke, supposing him to be safely on his way to Europe" Then follows a tirade of similar abuse which isn't calculated to enhance the value of the New York organ as a truthful journal The query with the public will be whether both these Democratic papers haven't told the truth, and whether in general, in view of the system of jugglery they carry on, it is not about as safe to hang as little faith as possible on the professions of the whole of that party machinery.

Mr. Horace Greeley follows up Judge Kelley of Pennsylvania in his abuse of Commissioner Wells by insinuating that that officer has done his "level best for his clients"— That may be a satisfactory way of meeting the figures of the revenue reformers. But possibly that rule may work both ways.— There is only one judgment on such arguments however and that is that they are too mean to use except in a failing cause The "clients" of protection are growing desperate because beautifully less

Kentucky is true to her instincts, and Bourbonism still reigns. Her Legislature heard yesterday that New York had voted to rescind its indorsement of the 15th amendment, and forthwith the members indulged in "irresistible demonstrations of applause" If slavery were to be reinstated in any State Kentucky would go into ecstacies from which it could never recover Such is modern Democracy—the mere coat-tail of civilization and a drag upon progress

An act of manifest justice was done yesterday, when in answer to a request of the Senate Vice President Colfax appointed Senator Hamlin to succeed the late Senator Fessenden in the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institute.

New York is asked to pay $1,000,000 for not having its streets cleaned. So says the Boston Post Isn't that rather severe and ungenerous in you, Mr Post, towards your Tammany brothers?

The Committee on Reconstruction in Washington yesterday, discussed the question of a general removal of political disabilities, and from what tech glues it is supposed that a bill for that purpose will be brought before the Committee at the next meeting.

The Governor of Nebraska says he will some time next month call a special session of the Legislature of his State for action on the 15th amendment. As the Democrats have but one member in the Senate and four in the House, it is not difficult to see what the action of the bodies will be.

WINTERPORT RAILROAD

To the Honorable the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Bangor

Your memorialists the President and Directors of the Winterport Railroad Company, incorporated by Act of the Legislature, approved February 26th, 1867, and duly organized as provided in said acts do by authority conferred upon them at the Annual Meeting of said Company, held in the City of Bangor Jan 3d 1870 respectfully present That the Company has made provisional arrangements for the completion of its road from Winterport to Bangor, prior to the first day of April 1871, but to assure the success of these arrangements and to put the Company in a position to commence operations early and to execute the work promptly and thoroughly it is necessary that further subscriptions to the Capital Stock of said Company should be promptly obtained, and that the sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars would be amply sufficient to guarantee the building of the road of the Company as before mentioned

Believing that this road is of vital necessity to the City of Bangor in its corporate as well as its private interests, and, bearing in mind that no aid commensurate with the great importance of the enterprise has been granted to said Company we are instructed to, and by virtue of these instructions we respectfully petition your honorable body to submit a proposition to the citizens of Bangor for a corporate subscription of fifty thousand dollars, to the Capital Stock of said Company in manner provided by the Lessislature in an act authorizing "any city or town in this State to raise money to aid in the construction of any Railroad in this State" approved Feby 28, 1867 We ask you to submit this question to the legal voters of the city for their decision on or before the 31st day of January 1870

As, by that act, the city may raise such sums of money as it shall deem expedient and appropriate the same to aid in the construction in such manner as they (you) shall deem proper,' we submit the following propositions as a basis of such negotiation stipulations and restrictions as we think would be mutually satisfactory to the City and the Winterport Railroad Company

1st. No further Corporate financial aid shall be solicited hereafter for the purpose of aiding in the building the road of the Company

2d No part of the City subscription to the Capital Stock of the Company, shall be in any manner granted, unless the Northern terminus of the road of said Company shall be within the City limits

3d The City shall not be held to pay any assessment upon its subscription, until the Company shall have so far completed its road the entire distance from Winterport to Bangor, as to be ready to receive the necessary rolling stock to enable it to transact business over its entire line. An early consideration of this petition is respectfully solicited, and we will ever pray

BANGOR, Jan. 3, 1870

To the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Bangor,

The undersigned citizens and legal voters of said city, respectfully request that you will issue your warrant calling a legal meeting of the inhabitants of said city to vote on the following question as provided by an Act authorizing any city or town in this State to raise money to aid in the construction of any Railroad in this State' Approved February 28, 1867, viz — "Will the Inhabitants of said City raise the sum of fifty thousand dollars by loan, and appropriate the same to aid in the construction of the Winterport Railroad by a subscription to the stock of the Winterport Railroad Corporation to that amount upon the conditions that the Northern terminus of said Railroad shall be within the limits of the City of Bangor, and that no part of said stock shall be due or payable until said Railroad is completed as a first class Railroad from Bangor to Winterport, (with exception of rolling stock) to the satisfaction of the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Bangor, and that said Railroad Corporation shall not ask or receive any other aid by loan or otherwise from the City of Bangor in its corporate capacity"

Your petioners also request that said meeting may be called on or before the 20th day of January instant—And as in duty bound will ever pray,

GEO W SNOW, City Clerk

VIRGINIA.

Dr P B Mills of this city is making a brief stop with his son in Warminster Nelson Co Virginia, on a plantation which suffered from the raids made by our army He has written some private letters home giving his idea of the condition of affairs there from which we are allowed to extract.

In his last of January 3d, he says 'Although the weather is genial beyond my expectation the people, both black and white kind and my health good yet I would like to be at my own fireside, and its surroundings. I have seen no place yet I should prefer to that, certainly so, if my health should be as good after my return as it has been here I believe Bangor people as a whole have been ahead of the most of the world certainly those parts of it I have seen, the equality of mankind and their rights and duties to each and all are generally better understood and defended there than in any community in which it has been my privilege to be acquainted This judgment comes not from want of personal attention for I have had more of them, and of the most kindly character, all the way from Bangor here and here, than I should have expected in Bangor—outside of my own household—in ten years * * * I have come to the conclusion, if Virginia soil is sacred, it is muddy The house where I write was the summer residence of Judge George Tucker, step-father to John Randolph One hundred feet from here was the house of Joseph C Cabell, the compeer of Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, yet on this plantation, the piteous moans of men dying under the lash could be heard at the steps of these doors, who, when loosed from their lashings, dropped, never to rise, and women have been pointed out to me, who, I was assured, had neither their first, nor their second skins on."

In another letter he writes "I yesterday dined with Mr. Horsley grandson of Major Yancey of former days, who was called the wheel-horse of Democracy. His daughter, Horsley's mother, and now the only one on seeing her note and others showing James quickness of earths and note—everybody now was trying to the consuming fire of the earth to live on; the troubled to him he was not the works of the Lord,' she said, 'the Lord would not have formed the negroes, that was the work of Yankees'

"The single century from this to Salt Sheep Rock, I should not know where to look for another, unless it be the one where the Patriot association of the locomotive brotherhood of Port Jervis, decided on Saturday evening to do no repairing on the Erie engines, as that would interfere with the strikers.

SCHENCK'S SEA WEED TONIC for the cure of Dyspepsia or Indigestion and all diseases arising from a debility in the stomach, invigorates the digestive powers and gives the proper tone of the gastric juice when that is deficient in addition, enables the patient to digest the coarsest nutriment and is a sovereign remedy for all cases of Indigestion

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS one of the most valuable medicines ever discovered, being a powerful substitute for calomel Having all the mild properties of the latter, without the dangerous effects

I will say these medicines Dr J H Schenck, of Philadelphia owes his unrivalled success in the treatment of this one disease Consumption The Pulmonic Syrup ripens the morbid matter, discharges it, and heals the Ulcers The Mandrake Pills act upon the liver and all obstructions therefrom, give the proper healthy tone and cures Liver Complaint, which is one of the most prominent causes of Consumption The Sea Weed tonic invigorates the powers of digestion, which is the source of the nourishment of the whole body, by first thoroughly preparing the food for the nourishment of the system, and then by strengthening the digestive organs bringing it to a normal and healthy condition, gives the purity of the blood by which the lungs are supplied The combined action of these medicines is to cleanse the blood, which is the great source of Consumption While these remedies are used in connection with the use of them is recommended sufficiently to bring the system to a favorable termination

Dr Schenck's Almanac containing a full treatise on the various forms of disease his mode of treatment and directions how to use his medicines can be had gratis or sent by mail by addressing his Physician and Post Office No 15 North Sixth street, Philadelphia Pa

GEORGIA AFFAIRS.

ATLANTA, Ga. Jan. 17.

Nothing was done in the Senate. The House met and read an order from Governor Bullock, approved by General Terry, to the effect that in order to give time to pending investigations, it was right that certain persons should hold seats under the reconstruction acts and give ample time to persons who design to take the oath. In order to do so, the Governor declares a recess until Wednesday next at noon. The decision of the Court Marial on the eligibility of certain members will be rendered to-morrow, and the House will probably organize on Wednesday.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS—SECOND SESSION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.

A large number of petitions were presented for the abolition of the franking privilege.

Mr Trumbull offered a resolution empowering the chair to appoint a member of the Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr Fessenden in the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institute.

The resolution was agreed to and the Chair appointed Mr. Hamlin.

The Virginia Bill was then taken up, and Mr Thayer opposed an unconditional admission of Virginia. He reminded the Senate that in dealing with the leaders of the rebellion "it was virtually a transfer of the contest from the field to the forum." He would vote against the admission of Virginia because guarantees for the present and future security had not been given.

Mr Drake asserted his distrust of the Virginia Legislature and insisted upon the imposition of fundamental conditions in the nature of enabling Congress more readily to deal with Virginia if she should prove treacherous to the confidence which might be reposed in her admission.

Mr Stewart read a telegram announcing the ratification of the 15th amendment by the Rhode Island Legislature, and said Virginia if admitted would complete the list of states whose votes were necessary to make the amendment a part of the Constitution of the United States. He replied in detail to the memorial recently presented by Mr. Sumner and vindicated the character of Governor Walker of Virginia.

Mr. Sumner said that in this controversy the the character and sentiment of Governor Walker were of the greatest importance as representing the class of people into whose hands it was proposed to commit the destiny of Virginia. He read from a speech purporting to have been delivered in Virginia by that gentleman and criticized many of its expressions as indicative of the opposition of the author to the county system and the public school provision of the new Constitution.

A portion of the speeches delivered by Gov. Walker at various times and places, was also quoted and commented upon as evidence of the disloyalty of his supporters.

Mr. Morton delivered a lengthy speech in review of the reconstruction legislation, during which he incidentally stated that a military commission was now sitting in Atlanta, Ga., to determine upon the qualification of the members of the Georgia Legislature and were exercising an authority equal to that of the Queen of Great Britain.

Mr. Edmunds said if the statement was true the authority of the commission must have been received from the Queen of Great Britain, for it could not have been received from the President.

Mr. Morton yielded to the motion to adjourn and the Senate adopted the motion—34 to 21.

HOUSE.

The House resumed the consideration of the bill for the transfer of the Philadelphia Navy Yard to League Island.

Mr. Dawes of Mass., made a powerful argument against the bill, on the score of economy, in which he reminded the House of the promises of the Republican party to reduce the expenses of the Government.

Mr. Kelley of Pa., followed in reply to Mr. Dawes and in support of the bill, but he had been speaking but a few minutes when the morning hour expired and the bill went over under the rules.

The House then took up Mr. Judd's appointment bill, and speeches were made by Mr. Paine of Wis., in support of it, and by Messrs. Hoar of Mass., and Willard of Vt., in opposition.

Finally, Mr. Scofield of Pa., moved to refer the bill to the committee of the whole, and that motion was agreed to—yeas 104, nays 64. The vote was principally a sensation one, the Western members mostly voting in the negative.

Mr. Scofield of Pa., offered a resolution calling on the Secretary of State for information as to the disposition made of the $600,000 allowed for aggressions on American Commerce by Japan. Adopted.

A resolution providing for a special committee to examine and report on the heating, lighting and ventilation of the Senate Chamber, and that of the House, gave rise to the usual denunciations of the present arrangements, Mr. Garfield characterizing the Representatives' Hall as the most skillfully contrived slaughter-house he was ever acquainted with! The resolution was adopted.

The House then at 4 o'clock adjourned.

Defendant set up that the property was attached by his deputy on writ of Adonijah Webber against Edward H. Davis, and that the property was then owned by said E. H. Davis.

A. Sanborn, Macomber, Rowe.

G. W. Pratt, F. A. Wilson.

—The Rev. Dr. Field will deliver a lecture before the Rhetorical Society at the Seminary Chapel, Thursday evening, January 20th, at 7½ o'clock. Subject: "Progress." This is the first of a course of lectures to be given before the Society this winter. Dr. Field will be followed by several of the clergymen of the city, together with members of the Faculty, who have kindly consented to appear in the course. The public are cordially invited.

—A special dispatch from Belfast, says the verdict in the case of Hooper vs. Haskell and others of Deer Isle, which was described by our correspondent yesterday, gives plaintiff damages to the amount of $471,68.

TEMPERANCE MATTERS. The semi-annual session of the Grand Division Sons of Temperance will be held in Richmond on Wednesday, January 26th. State Temperance Convention will be held in Auburn on Thursday and Friday, January 27th and 28th. Arrangements have been made with all Railroads in the State for free return tickets to all who attend the meetings.

—A dispatch from Augusta says the annual meeting of the State Board of Education is now in session at the State House. Addresses were delivered yesterday afternoon on the common schools and moral instruction. The Board will be in session during the week.

—A Washington special to the Boston Journal, says the President has nominated to the Senate Edward S. J. Neally as Collector at Bath; Nathan Webb as U. S. District Attorney for Maine, and Sebastian Marble as United States Marshal for Maine. The nominations of Webb and Marshall were agreed upon last spring, and were generally approved by the delegation from Maine, but it is understood that Senator Morrill would have preferred the reappointment of those who have held the office.

—A dispatch from Lewiston says the annual meeting of the Maine Board of Agriculture was held there yesterday. Samuel Wasson of Ellsworth, was elected President. Today a Farmers' Convention will be held there, under the auspices of the Board of Agriculture, continuing for three days. A large attendance is expected.

—A dispatch from Portland says the Argus publishes an account from its correspondent at Tremont, of the drowning of two men named Isaac Bigford and Isaac Verrill, both sons of sea captains, by the upsetting of their boat while out gunning last Thursday. The body of Bigford was recovered.

Four stores were broken into in that city last night, but the combined value of property stolen amounted to but little over one hundred dollars.

—George W. Low of Guilford, raised last year from four small sized early Rose potatoes, fifty pounds, which is a very large yield

—Mr. George W. Childs, proprietor of the Philadelphia Ledger, has issued a very handsome Almanac, for 1870, of 56 pages. Eighty thousand copies have been printed for distribution to Ledger subscribers.

—AROOSTOOK SHEEP. The Presque Isle Sunrise says Geo. Parks, Esq., proprietor of the Mattawamkeag House, kindly furnishes us with a statement of the number of sheep which passed his house between July 16th and Jan. 1st, on their way to a market from Aroostook. There were 48 droves, amounting in all to 22,733. It will be seen by this, that our county is becoming a great sheep-raising district. The business which these sheep alone would make for a railroad, would be no inconsiderable item.

—The Argus says that Monday evening the police picked up on Fore-street, Portland, a woman named Burt, who persisted in lying down in the street and making night hideous with her drunken cries. About 12 o'clock her husband, William, was found up on Commercial street, in the same delightful condition, and was removed to the station house on a shutter. A fine couple.

WINTERPORT RAILROAD.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier.

It is said that the Aldermen will call a meeting of the citizens on the 31st inst., to determine if they will authorize the City Government to subscribe for $50,000 of stock in the Winterport Railroad.

Is it probable that the citizens will vote this sum from their pockets without any security except the stock?

DEATH OF THE MOTHER OF MADAME PAREPA-ROSA. The sad news was received by Madame Parepa-Rosa last evening of the death of her mother, which occurred in London The intelligence was first received by Mrs Segum of New York by means of the cable telegraph, and at once transmitted to Parepa-Rosa, reaching here about half past six o'clock. The deceased was a member of the celebrated Segum family—a sister of Edmund Segum, the famed baritone, so well remembered by old opera goers—and herself a singer of high repute. Her career was contemporaneous with her brother's and she appeared in opera in Italy and in many other parts of the Continent She married Count Parepa, a Wallachian noble man, and was known best by that name. She has been an invalid for some years, we believe, but her death was entirely unlooked for, and her daughter received a letter from her but a week or two ago stating that she was as well as usual.—Two sisters of the deceased have died within a few months and one of them quite recently Edmund Segalo died in New York, Dec 11, 1852, and his widow (above referred to) still resides in that city. She sang in opera with her husband, and was Mrs Childe before her marriage. Mr E Segum, one of the baritones of the Parepa-Rosa Opera Troupe, and Mr. W Segum, one the treasurers of the company, are sons of Edmund Segum, and consequently cousins of Madame Parepa-Rosa.

Madame was thrown into the deepest grief by the announcement of her mother's decease and a change of opera was of course made necessary last evening. "The Bohemian Girl" being given in place of "Martana," in which she was to have appeared. She will have the most cordial and heartfelt sympathy of her many friends in this city, and indeed of our whole community.—Boston Advertiser of the 14th

POETRY.

THE FAITHFUL LOVERS.

I'd been away from her three years—about that—
And I returned to find my Mary true,
And though I'd question her I did not doubt that
It was unnecessary so to do

'Twas by the chimney corner we were sitting
Mary' said I, 'have you been always true?'
Frankly,' says she, just pausing in her knitting,
'I don't think I've unfaithful been to you,
But for the three years past I'll tell you what
I've done then say if I've been true or not

When first you left, my grief' was uncontrollable
Alone I mourned my miserable lot,
And all who saw me thought me inconsolable,
Till Captain Clifford came from Aldershott,
To flirt with him amused me while 'twas new,
I don't count that unfaithfulness Do you?

The next—oh! let me see—was Frankie Phipps,
I met him at my uncle's, Christmas tide,
And neath the mistletoe where lips meet lips,
He gave me his first kiss'—and here she sighed,
We stayed six weeks at uncle's—how time flew!
I did not count that unfaithfulness. Do you?

'Lord Cecil Fossmottle, only twenty-one,
'Lent me his horse. Oh, how we rode and raced!
We scoured the downs—we rode to hounds—such fun!
And often was his arm about my waist—
That was to lift me up or down But who Would count that as unfaithfulness? Do you?

'Do you know Reggy Vere? Ah, how he sings!
We met—'twas at a picnic Ah, such weather!
He gave me, look, the first of those two rings,
When we were lost in Cheffien woods together
Ah, what a happy time we spent, we two!
I don't count that unfaithfulness to you

'I've yet another ring from him. D' you see
The plain gold circlet that is shining here?
I took her hand Oh, Mary! Can it be
That you'—Quoth she, 'That I am Mrs Vere
I don't count that unfaithfulness. Do you?'
'No' I replied, 'for I am married too'

INTO MISCHIEF.

Dainnag feet and busy fingers,
Net or still the whole day through,
For the little brain from dream land
Brings them work enough to do
Racing through the gorgeous parlor,
Romping on the winding stair,
Tearing books and breaking vases—
Into mischief everywhere

Picks the cakes and tastes the jelly,
Breaks the window, slams the door,
Throws the statues from their brackets,
Scatters playthings on the floor,
Tearing little coats and trousers,
Rumpling up his curly hair—
Busy, naughty little fingers,
Into mischief everywhere

Spilling ink upon the carpet,
Dashing pictures from the wall,
Breaking mirrors, singing, shouting,
In the attic and the hall,
Tracking mud across the entries,
Turning over desk and chair
Cutting up the morning paper—
Into mischief everywhere

But no look of hate or malice
Darkens o'er those laughing eyes
Not a thought of harm or sinning
In his little bosom lies,
For his soul is pure and guiltless,
Whate'er harm the fingers do—
Though the little feet are straying
Into mischief all day through

A HOMELY STORY OF HOME.

BY MRS REBECCA HARDING DAVIS

CHAPTER I.

Christmas Eve! John Firth fancied that even the speechless nature about him knew what day it was, and waited for the Babe that was to bring brotherhood to man. The distant mountain peaks, that had faced the sea for ages with the same awful, inexpressible meaning, wrapped themselves to-day in soft white mantles, and bent their heads like prophets who had heard at last some kindly answer to the long-vexed riddle of the world. Between them the little seaport town cuddled snugly full of life and heat. The air was alive with children's voices and the tinkle of bells, the snow had enchanted the dull shop-fronts into white Gothic arches or glittering Eastern minarets, the shops themselves had become nothing less than little Ali Baba caves of jewelry, or sparkling candies, or yellow turkeys wreathed about with feathery green crow's-foot The house windows, too, were open, and inside were Christmas trees, and people, hot and hurried, about them, lighting the fairy candles before the children would come home Overhead the setting sun had burned the sky crimson, and at the end of the narrow street one could see the glitter of the ice coast-line, the flag flapping on the fort against the wind, and the great plane of the sea, with the surf rolling in low, joyous murmurs

People ran against Firth and his wife continually so great was the hurry of the crowd, calling 'Hello Firth!' or "Happy Christmas, John'' Everybody was loaded with bundles except themselves. Their hands were empty. Mrs Firth looked sourly at Squire Dunn's carriage as it rolled by filled with a doll in bridal dress and a toy castle, but when she came to her washerwoman's shanty at the corner, her contempt broke into words for there was Betty with a bit of a pine bush, hanging a bag of marbles and a wooden doll on it.

"It is the very madness of waste" cried Mrs Firth "How many of these poor wretches know where next week's bread is to come from, I wonder"

John did not speak for a minute "And yet I was just thinking, Mary," he said at last. "how good it was that one morning in the year the one beautiful thought should come to all the world, to the banker at his desk, and the thief in the prison, to poor Betty in her cabin, as well as to the queen in her palace They all are forced to see once in the year the same picture"

'What do you mean'" The cold, dry tone somehow reminded Firth that his wife was a member of the church, and he was not.

He answered uneasily. "I meant the white flocks asleep on the hills of Galilee, and the star shining down into the stable, where the child lay,' lowering his tone.

'What proof is there that Christ was born on the twenty-fifth of December John?" in her quietest tone of argument

'I don't know, Mary," hastily. "We will not say anything more about it"

"Probably that would be better, folding her lead-colored shawl tighter about her spare figure

"But I thought," hurrying his words out before his courage gave way, "that I would take home some trifle to Rob To mark the day you know Very inexpensive, of course, Mary That is, if you do not object."

"It is as well you consulted me You seem to have forgotten that the religious education of the children was to be left to me. I have tried to show Robert, young as he is, his condition as a sinner, and the necessity of repentance I certainly do object to filling his head with pictures of the stable, or of flocks asleep, and calling that religion. It is Catholic and heathenish," her high cheek-bones growing hot. They walked on in silence.

"Robby has not been out to-day?" said Firth, looking wistfully down at the noisy troops of boys with blue noses, and their pockets full of pennies, staring with insatiate eyes in at the shop windows.

"No He had not finished his lessons I am willing he should come out, though. There's no better lesson than self-denial to teach a child.

"No, no! Let him stay indoors." John Firth lagged behind his wife Squire Dunn came along behind him, clapping the thin little man on the shoulder, and taking in with a shrewd glance his sunken, dulled eye and shabby suit of black. "Hillo, Firth! Thin won't do! You newspaper men don't know what moderation is, even in work Take a holiday boy. When you tap a tree so deep as that, it's the life that's oozing out—mind I tell you."

John laughed and went on. A holiday? God knows, Mary was a good woman. But she had, in some way, shut all holidays out of their life It had been for years one long, dull stretch of work; for religion stern rules of duty barring them in on either side, and in the future a certain fearful looking for of judgment. He did want rest. When they were in the house Mary would see it, and instead of going to her sewing, would read Emerson or Edwards on the Will to him She prided herself on knowing what cordial to give to an exhausted brain or doubting soul It might be childish in him but just then he loathed Edwards on the Will and on all sorts of orthodox spiritual meat. If he could take Rob by the hand and go lounging about the streets, joking with old friends, looking in at the shop windows ending perhaps with the pantomime at the theatre! If he could show to the dear boy the picture that had haunted him all day! If he could not rid himself of the words of the old carol

God rest you, all good Christians
Let nothing you dismay,
For Jesus Christ the Savior
Was born this Christmas day

It seemed to him that across the gulf of centuries he could feel the healing touch of the Christ. He stretched out his hand upon him. And he fancied, indeed as he was, that the Child came to bring back the world to a divine childhood again, to thaw out of it anxiety for money-getting, and malice, and sour discontent, and bring the day of brotherhood, of light hearts and happy trust and jests and laughter His fancies dulled at his own front door That house, a stranger would think, was the very squarest and plainest object he had ever seen until he saw the inside of it, and understood how plain and square and meager anything on God's earth could be made. John Firth never entered his own clean clay yard, with the ash bin at one side and the rain-barrel at the other, without a secret spasm The narrow hall was laid with yellow and red oilcloth and papered in gaudy stripes; and so it went on to the end Money was saved.

At first when they were married he would have spent all of his savings to see the house bright and pretty. He had a whim of making it a sort of fairy land for Rob, he wanted to have friends dropping in to breakfast dinner, tea he wanted to teach the boy music and gardening, he would have broken up the year with all kinds of holidays

But Mary had conquered She had been tempted by pleasure in her youth, and now she had laid out a narrow stony path for herself to Heaven, and meant to take her child in it with her There was no time for idling in the House Beautiful by the way Or money to spend in it, either

John entered the dull dark entry a few minutes after his wife. She was already seated hard at work sewing by the stove in the dining-room, the only place where she allowed a fire After the picture outside, the lighted eager street, the sunset reddening the snow fields, and the vast sea, this bald square room came with the sudden contrast of utter misery gardiness and discomfort. The table was set with cracked delft of different patterns yellow wooden chairs were ranged about the wall, a tin lamp flared on the mantle-shelf Mrs Firth did not look up when he came in 'Ann," she called sharply 'Ann! supper" She never scolded her servants, or wasted a syllable more upon them than if they were machines Firth sat down and looked wistfully across the stove at his wife. She was growing thin and haggard with hard, unceasing work It was all for him and the boy She cared nothing for her own comfort And yet he would have given all the money she would make, just then, to have had her throw down her work to welcome him, and race an hour away as she used to do She had a habit once of stroking his forehead when it ached and fussing with his hair, and thinking his scooped, sandy face handsome as Apollo's poor girl' But that was a long time ago

Ann brought in the boiled mackerel and pot of rye coffee She was an old woman a mulatto, with a patient quiet face, like a cow When she had rung the bell she bobbed a courtsey

'If you please, Miss Mary, kin I have to-morrow evenin? De chillen they're mus' up to hev a bit of Christmas supper

'I should think you were too old a woman to want merry-makings, Ann. I cert'nly cannot neglect my own work to indulge you She put the tin lamp on the table and sat down

'Where is Rob, mother?' ask d John crumbling his bread nervously

'I had to discomplime Robert He is so shamefully idle with his lessons that I gave him the Catechism to study, and sent him to bed without his supper.

Firth said nothing, but he left his supper untasted and went out in a minute or two Mary heard him going softly up stairs The bread choked her She leaned her elbows on the table, staring at the lamp She knew what her husband and child thought of her? She was a black cloud blotting out all their sunshine' Because she knew her duty Did she take her own pleasure? Then thought she did not love them Oh God' what had she on earth but John and Rob? Some day they would do her justice when they knew how she had toiled and saw the money they would have frittered away

She rose hastily, and going to another room, took out a box and unlocked it It was full of corn She dipped her hand in There was the means to provide for their old age and to make a man of Rob She would coin her heart's blood into money to give Rob a chance among men

She went up the stairs The box held money had strengthened her John had taken Rob from the window, where he sat in his night-gown crying and shivering, watching the boys outside, and was rubbing his bare feet and whispering a story Now Rob was the worst material out of which to mould the premature little saint which his mother purposed He was a broad-built, quick blooded little six-year old, with an ugly, honest face, bold, frank eyes, and a cleft chin, like his father's, that quivered easily Firth could not stop his shivering or sobs

'It was so dark and cold papa' he cried I don t care if I'm a coward' I don t want to anything I wish I was dead'

Are you hungry, Robert?' she asked

He would not speak to her at first at all then he suddenly rushed over to her, climbed into her lap, and laid his head on her breast almost strangling her with his silent, passionate embrace Rob's affection always frightened his mother as much as his rage She felt as if she had some untamed, dangerous animal in her yoke

'Control yourself, my son,' she said trying to put him from her, but he clung the closer A minute after his head sank heavier, and he was asleep, still sobbing dry, tearless sobs.

Firth laid him in bed and then stood there silent The moon threw a white light on the pillow and the unhappy little face there 'I fear you hardly understand the boy Mary' he said gently

'Sometimes I think I do not Perhaps I am mistaken for a minute Then she will Rob child is more open with even her than no mother ever worked harder for her children, but I have no time to hum or play with them'

Now this is all a homely little matter It might happen in any house any day But John Firth knew by it that the decisive hour in his boy's life and his own would both be that night. For himself the end was in clear if but it was the beginning of all things with Rob. The lives of both In a few days in the hands of the woman who stood quiet and firm in the Winter moonlight Both turned Rob's pillow, smoothed down his night-gown he could not keep his trembling hands from him Could God mean this to be so hard and bare for his boy? He would have dealt differently with any little child

To his wife he said not a word When she spoke he would know how it would be.

"I will do my duty in the sight of a jealous God,' she said, at last. 'I will try and mold my son into the manner of man he should be If I fail, his blood will be on His head and not mine'

There was no answer John Firth held the child's chapped little hands in his putting it softly In a little while, perhaps, he would go out of that door never to return and it seemed to him as if his boy would be driven thrown into a cold, and dark, and silence, where no help could follow him He sat there a long while, and then stooped and kissed him and went out to his night's work He tried to say 'Good-by, Rob,' but could not
